PICK OF THE WEEK

DAY OF THE DEAD

Zombies have been frightening American moviegoers since the 1960s, but they've been around way longer than that. Learn all about our undead friends and celebrate their pop-cultural heritage at THE ATLANTA ZOMBIE SYMPOSIUM, a daylong commemoration of the living dead. A panel discussion, "The Zombie Perceived: Religion, Media and Society," kicks off the event at 1 p.m. at the Clary Theater at the Bill Moore Student Success Center at Georgia Tech, followed by screenings of "Night of the Living Dead" and "Return of the Living Dead," beginning at 5 p.m. at the Plaza Theatre. After that, shamble over to (where else?) the Graveyard Tavern for "Dance of the Undead," featuring a DJ, live music and a "zombie transformation chamber," at 10 p.m. For more info, visit www.stanwoodard.com/zombie.—Meghan Kotowski

Don't forget to check out the silent auction and charity whiskey-tasting benefiting Paws Atlanta. 2 to 11 p.m. at Park Tavern. $15 at the gate. www.beerandwhiskeyfest.com.—M.K.

SUNDAY DRIVE: If Dragon*Con and the Decatur Book Festival don't satisfy your need for manly Labor Day Weekend options, we're here to remind you that DRIVE INVASION takes over the Starlight Six Drive-In for its 60th anniversary, with 12 bands on two stages and five fun flicks to enjoy, all for $28 ($5 for children under 9). Gates open at 11 a.m. www.starlightdrivein.com.—M.K.

DAY OF THUNDER: You don't have to win a fancy cup or even drive a car to be a part of NASCAR history. Tonight's PEP BOYS AUTO 500 is Atlanta Motor Speedway's first Sprint Cup Series night race, and it's celebrating this momentous event with performances by Diamond Rio and Jason Michael Carroll. Gates open at 2 p.m. www.atlantamotorspeedway.com.—M.K.
